Access to food for the most vulnerable	Access to Food Access to household essentials – cleaning products, Toiletries etc.	People with Disabilities Shielding/ Vulnerable isolation	A survey of frontline Scottish community organisations found that there have been improvements in emergency food aid provision since the start of lockdown. However, it also highlighted a sense of emerging concern amongst community organisations that the food insecurity crisis is far from over Report here The research conducted by Scottish Poverty and Inequality Research Unit at Glasgow Caledonian University found: 65% of frontline organisations report demand for emergency food has risen over the past month, with 73% of organisations	Food for Good Priority: Access to food for the most vulnerable Application states: ‘Working with the lead officer, small allocations of funding will be used to continue current provision, through providing emergency food/meals to extremely vulnerable families and groups. This includes those in the shielding category, older people, referred families (Housing Association referrals and social work referrals) and refugees. Funding would continue posts of existing community chefs, support the expansion of community fridges through a partnership approach. Continued support for food collection points located within community centres across the area. In addition, there would be a small development allocation for short targeted projects, as this worked very well within Round 1. Funding would also support the development of the partnership Govan Food Pantry Initiative, and will support Elderpark Housing Association, The Preshal Trust,		Specific expressions of interest invited from organisations who are able to demonstrate positive impact on food insecurity for those more vulnerable groups.
